

Preface

”There is danger inherent in the mechanical efficiency of our modern methods, danger lets the craftsman forget that union cannot be imposed, but may have to be encouraged. For a bone is a plant, with its root in the soft tissues, and when its vascular connections are damaged, it often requires, not the technique of a cabinet maker, but the patient care and understanding of a gardener”.

Girdlestone, 1932.